MARRIAGE, FAMILY, AND SOCIETY

by HYMAN RODMAN
Merrill-Palmer Institute

A collection of outstanding articles especially edited for the introductory course in family sociology. The readings cover the major developmental areas in the family life cycle—dating and mate selection; husband-wife relations; parent-child relations; adolescents; siblings, and peers; and extended kinship relations. Also included are special sections on the changing American family and on social class and family relations. For each section of the reader, Dr. Rodman has written an introduction summarizing other research and integrating the material.

"I congratulate Dr. Rodman for his judicious selections and for thoughtful introduction and analysis of respective theories."

—Pitirim Sorokin, Harvard University

1966; SS28; $2.95

A Random House Study in Sociology

BLUE-COLLAR MARRIAGE

by MIRRA KOMAROVSKY
Harvard College, Columbia University

"... penetrating theoretical analysis of case study materials ... Her book is a credit to the field."

—American Sociological Review,

THREE BABIES

Biographies of Cognitive Development

Edited by JOSEPH CHURCH, Brooklyn College of The City University of New York

The author brings together intensive studies of three children during the first two years of life, as recorded by their mothers and edited by Professor Church. The editor's note, introductions, and concluding chapter are supplemented by a comprehensive index that will enable the student to trace specific themes and to make independent comparisons.

"... provides both raw material for the student of human development and a wealth of research potential for the scholar."

—Yvonne Bruckbill, Behavior Development Laboratory, University of Denver

1966; 320 pages; $2.95, paperbound

ON THE IMPORTANCE OF INFANCY

by LAWRENCE K. FRANK

Summarizes a wide variety of materials on infants to give a comprehensive statement of what is known and what is being discovered about the initial period in human development.

THE FAMILY, SOCIETY, AND THE INDIVIDUAL

Second Edition

William M. Kephart

The second edition of this standard text continues to use the family to illustrate the relationship between — and interdependence of — individual needs and societal imperatives. The entire book has been thoroughly revised, and completely new chapters or sections have been included on Social Class, Mate Selection, and Marital Adjustment. Dr. Kephart maintains the unique blending of scholarship and writing skill that made the first edition so popular with both students and instructors. A revised Instructor's Manual is available.

COMPARATIVE FAMILY SYSTEMS

Edited by M. F. Nimkoff

An introduction to the major variations in the organization of the human family: what they are, what causes them, and what differences they make. Twelve authorities examine family life in societies with various political, economic, religious, marital and descent patterns. Dr. Nimkoff supplies supporting introductory and concluding analyses. A comprehensive annotated bibliography is appended.

From SCHENKMAN

An indispensable guide in the field of Family Relations:

PREMARITAL COUNSELING

by Aaron L. Rutledge, Merrill Palmer Institute of Human Development and Family Life

Dr. Rutledge has used the material in this book in "a variety of training settings with Psychologists, Social Workers, Clergy, Physicians, Family Education Specialists, and others." Every salient aspect of preparing a couple for marriage and family life is presented here in lucid and very human style; a deep concern for family life is always evident behind the vast amount of knowledge and theory gleaned from a long career in counseling.

Some Topics Discussed:

- tensions and conflicts of an engaged couple
- overcoming the resistance of the couple
- group counseling as compared to individual counseling
- roles of counselors, clergy, parents, and teachers
- medical preparation for marriage
- sexual enlightenment of the couple
- male and female sexual response
- birth control
- effects of drugs on marital adjustment
- and many other related topics

More and more people involved in Family Relations counsel and study are regarding premarital counseling as an opportunity to "do some really good preventive work." No one seriously interested in this field should be without this new and comprehensive work.

EDUCATION FOR MARRIAGE

BY JAMES A. PETERSON

Chairman of the Sociology Department and
Marriage Counselor of the University of Southern California

Widely acclaimed for its insight and clarity, this text (now in its second edition) helps the student to develop a sound approach to marriage choice and to the necessary adjustments in the various phases of marriage and family life. The author makes clear the importance of the rapid shifts in functions, roles, and values, and the impact of these trends on modern marriage. Stressing increased awareness of these developments and the necessity for personal growth, the text guides the student in a step-by-step preparation for the achievement and maintenance of a cohesive marital relationship. With figures, tables, and half-tones. 1964. xvii, 526 pages • Cloth • $6.95.

KINSHIP AND FAMILY ORGANIZATION

By BERNARD FARBER, University of Illinois

A book of readings by leading social scientists that views the family from a sociological perspective as one of the kinship groups in society. By placing the organization of the nuclear family in the context of kinship patterns, this book tries to indicate which features of the family can be expected to be emphasized in different kinship structures. It relates the type of kinship and family system to the total community and society and then focuses on kinship and family in contemporary society, using cross-cultural comparisons of American, European, and non-Western societies. The book deals with general sociological perspectives on the family . . . on patterns of kinship and their effects on nuclear family relationships . . . on interaction within the family . . . on change in family organization.

MARRIAGE AND FAMILY RELATIONS

By ROBERT C. WILLIAMSON, Lehigh University

Scholarly, interdisciplinary, and realistic, this book thoroughly examines the problems of marriage and family relations. Viewed in a wider societal context with an emphasis on socialization, a wide range of topics is presented with scientific honesty. Premarital sex . . . economic problems . . . sexual adjustment in marriage . . . problems in the parent-child relationship . . . separation and divorce are all discussed candidly in non-moralistic terms. The book is a skillful blend of historical fact, recent research findings, and theoretical speculation.

MARRIAGE AND FAMILY INTERACTION

By ROBERT R. BELL, Temple University

Designed primarily for Marriage and Family courses, this text analyzes the family within a consistent scientific framework. It brings together the most recent research findings within a broad social psychological framework, placing primary stress on the middle-class family within the context of social change. Marriage and Family Interaction is a functional text, based on the belief that students may personally benefit from an intellectual and academic understanding of marriage and the family. "The belief is that functional value comes from intellectual understanding rather than from a series of prescriptions and recipes on what to do in hypothetical situations." —Robert R. Bell

THE AMERICAN ADOLESCENT

By DAVID GOTTLIEB, Michigan State University, and CHARLES RAMSEY, Colorado State University

In this volume, the emergence and impact of youth culture in our society, including the social structural factors that have brought about the current status of youth, are analyzed. The authors cover youth-adult conflict, education, delinquency, minority group adolescents, and other current problems. The transitional processes of socialization, occupational choice, romance, and courtship are also carefully analyzed. The American Adolescent moves beyond a theoretical formulation of youth behavior and notes areas in which the gap between the generations might be lessened.

THE FAMILY:
As Process and Institution

Clifford Kirkpatrick, Indiana University

Written by the winner of the 1965 Burgess Award, this standard textbook applies a consistent theoretical framework to our present knowledge of family life. Combining theory with empirical research findings, it uses abundant case material to illustrate concepts and generalizations. Family types and dilemmas are systematically analyzed as are social changes affecting the family. "Perhaps the most important text today dealing with family analysis."
—Journal of Marriage and Family, 2nd Ed., 1963. 705 pp., illus. $7.50

DEVELOPMENTAL COUNSELING

Donald H. Blocher, University of Minnesota

This new textbook presents both counseling theory and procedure in clear, simple style. It stresses the counselor's role as an agent of change, his role in such social systems as school and family, and his interest in social class differences. Psychological in approach, the book draws on the behavioral sciences. Describes human development through life stages in terms of social roles, developmental tasks, and coping behaviors. Thus the prospective counselor can understand developmental processes as they relate to clients. Models of human effectiveness show the student the upper limits of human development. 1966. 250 pp. $6.00

MARRIAGE ANALYSIS

Foundations for Successful Family Life

Harold T. Christensen, Purdue University

A comprehensive treatment of marriage, focusing on the inter-personal relationships of the marriage partners during courtship, marriage, and parenthood. Book analyzes the personality traits and behavior patterns contributing to success or failure in married life and parenthood; examines family life and the factors that affect it; discusses broad social programs for strengthening marriage and family living. Selected readings in each chapter exemplify the best sources on the subjects treated. Problems and projects further thinking, study, and research. "The book abounds with good, solid, down-to-earth suggestions." —Contemporary Psychology, 2nd Ed., 1958. 645 pp., illus. $6.50

THE COMMUNITY

An Introduction to a Social System

Irwin T. Sanders, The Ford Foundation

New—Second Edition! A textbook on community life, treating the generic characteristics in all communities, large, small, industrial, rural, at home and abroad. Book's objective is to view the community as a social system made up of human relationships. Each system is studied independently yet related to the others to show the part it plays in the total community. Book's ultimate aim is to enable the student to see the community in a new light and to make him aware of the necessity for proper application of the scientific method. 2nd Ed., 1966. 549 pp., illus. $7.75
