Abortion Politics

The Hawaii Experience

by Patricia G. Steinhoff and Milton G. Diamond

In 1970, Hawaii became the first state to repeal its criminal abortion law. This objective, unbiased account of the grassroots campaign that dramatically changed public consciousness about abortion and translated public concern into institutional change, relives the high emotion with which events were charged. The authors have drawn upon legal reports, newspaper files, surveys and interviews of the participants, and oral and written reports of the legislative committee hearings.

Adjustment in Intercultural Marriage

edited by Wen-Shing Tseng, John F. McDermott, Jr., and Thomas W. Maretzki

The ways in which individual cultures intermingle and develop new cultural systems or subsystems are the subject of this study, which focuses on the family structure as the carrier of culture. Problem areas and adjustment patterns of intercultural marriage, with particular reference to child rearing and family interaction, are examined in detail, and suggestions are offered for counseling.

Counseling Across Cultures

edited by Paul Pedersen, Walter Lonner, and Juris Draguns

Here is a thorough review of the literature dealing with intercultural counseling, discussions of workable counseling methods, and sympathetic examinations of several target populations. Since its publication in 1976 it has been widely used as a classroom text and is now in its second printing. "... there is much here for the practitioner." — Child Welfare

New—Fifth Edition

MARRIAGE AND FAMILY DEVELOPMENT

Evelyn Millis Duvall, Family Life Consultant

Completely rewritten and updated, this new edition includes data and findings from the latest research in the areas of marriage and family. New material includes such topics as: alternative forms of marriage; marriage contracts; sex differences and gender roles; marital options; changing sexual attitudes and behavior; death of family members; dissolution of marriage; social change; and racial and ethnic differences. The life-cycle approach has been retained; keyed references, tables and charts amplify the text.

559 pages/1977/clothbound, $12.95

*New—FAMILY STRUCTURE AND INTERACTION
A Comparative Analysis

Gary R. Lee, Washington State University

In this book the author demonstrates how comparative research has contributed to theory development in the sociology of the family. The focus throughout is on knowledge about family structure and behavior which has been generated, refined or extended by comparative research. Organization is topical, rather than systemic, with the objective of explanation rather than description. Controversial topics include premarital relations, sex roles, and the relationship of roles to conjugal power.

TEENAGE SUICIDE: "I Want To Die"

"A cinematic study of suicide in the young adult which will evoke both sympathy and understanding."

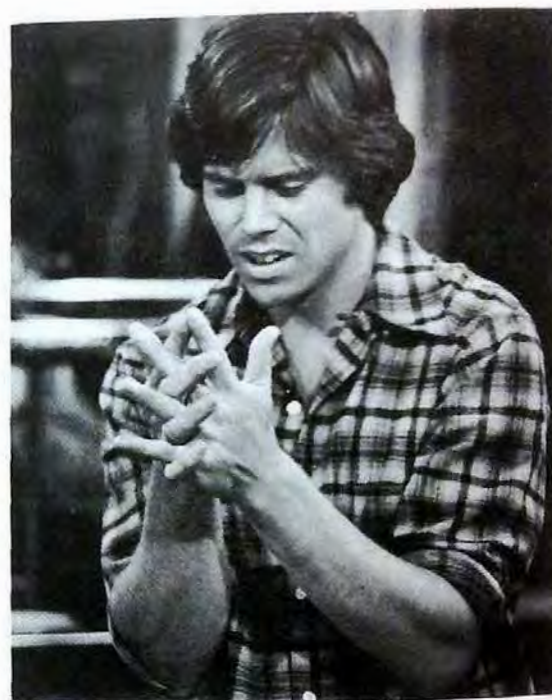

Bill arrives home for Thanksgiving dinner with his family and calmly announces that he intends to kill himself. First blaming his parents, then vocalizing his depression and confusion, Bill is ultimately forced to confront his mother's desperate plea for understanding and help and to accept the sole responsibility for his death wish.

MOTHERS AFTER DIVORCE

20 min., color, Rental $30, Sale $285

Four women with children of high school age—women who led protected lives until divorce—talk openly about their new lives, including: feelings of numbness and rejection; sharing the new load of responsibilities with children without making them grow up too soon; managing job and family; discovering new potentials, helping their children trust in love.

STEPPARENTING: NEW FAMILIES. OLD TIES

25 min., color, Rental $35, Sale $345

Becoming a stepparent can mean becoming an instant parent, or blending two families, or leaving one family behind and learning to care for a new one. In this film several families share their experiences, their feelings, and ways they have learned to cope with stepfamily situations.

This film was chosen Best in Category for Communication and Family Process in the 1977 NCFR Awards Competition.

GABRIEL IS TWO DAYS OLD

15 min., b/w, Rental $15, Sale $149

A film about infancy. A new mother talks with pediatrician T Berry Brazelton about her two-day-old son. While examining Gabriel, they discuss his inborn strengths, his seeming helplessness, his reflexes, abilities, and sociability; and Gabriel's mother's reactions to her sudden responsibility for a tiny human being. Winner of the 1974 CINE Golden Eagle Award.

BILL AND SUZI: NEW PARENTS

13 min., b/w, Rental $15, Sale $129

How does becoming a parent for the first time affect a couple's life together? During their five-week-old daughter Becky's checkup, Bill and Suzi discuss their feelings about Becky with Dr. Brazelton. They talk about the pleasure she brings, coping with her when she is difficult, and the adjustments they have had to make in their own lives. Bill also mentions the jealousy he felt both before and after Becky's birth.

SARA HAS DOWN'S SYNDROME

16 min., color, Rental $15, Sale $189

Six-year-old Sara lives with her parents; three sisters, aged 8, 11, and 18; and her 16-year-old brother. She is seen interacting with her family and working in a classroom with other children. The different members of the family discuss their feelings about Sara and adjustments they have had to make in their lives. One comes away from this film realizing that the retarded child is capable of a great deal, given patience and understanding.

FAMILIES AT HOME—Film series. Price furnished upon request

How do families transmit values? To explore this question, seven families around the country, each with a four-year-old child, were filmed at a mealtime. The resulting series of seven films allows the student of family life to see many and diverse ways families transmit values in commonplace daily activity. As a follow-up, one family was filmed three years later adding an eighth film to the series.
