The foremost book on family studies

This is the first volume of an authoritative and comprehensive two-volume series on current theories and research about family phenomena. Thirty-eight experts in sociology, psychology, home economics, child development, and family studies clarify and extend their own theoretical work, covering such vital issues as the effects of social networks on the family; heterosexual permissiveness, wife-mother employment; men's work and men's families; mate selection; parental support and control techniques in the socialization of the child; sibling relationships; the influence of social class on socialization; communication; and determinants of violence in the family. Includes a valuable introduction to the field and an exhaustive Bibliography.

"PREGNANT FATHERS" 28 minutes, 16mm, color, synchronous sound made in cooperation with Stanford University Communications Department. "PREGNANT FATHERS" is a sensitive, beautifully filmed presentation of a prepared child-birth, concentrating on the father's role in pregnancy and birth. The film makes some strong statements about the changing role of men in today's society and encourages men to participate in physical emotional, social, and cognitive preparation for birth . . . and parenthood. The film culminates in a beautiful birth, without the need for episiotomy, as the cameras move from mother to father in the delivery room. The birth itself is a profound experience that will give to all who experience it a new appreciation for the potential of Fatherhood.

Middle Road Traveler

A 12-Part Series on learning to be a good parent

As teachers and others who work with children, you will agree that it's not possible to over-educate in the area of parenting. You've probably observed every kind of parental "mistake" capable of being made.

Now MIDDLE ROAD TRAVELER, a series of twelve, 30-minute programs, offers you the most refreshing approach to parental education you've seen in a long time.

MIDDLE ROAD TRAVELER is available now from Great Plains National on a wide variety of open reel video tape formats, video cassette or 16mm film. To reserve your no-cost/ no-obligation preview, simply write or call a GPN Programming Counselor today.
