DESCRIPTION

The National Council on Family Relations is an international, non-profit educational and resource organization. NCFR's purpose is to enable educators, practitioners, and interested laypersons to work together toward the strengthening of marriage and the family by:

- establishing professional standards
- promoting and coordinating educational efforts
- encouraging family research
- supporting the development of community services for families
- stimulating sound, coherent family policy and legislation
- providing information on family resources
- sharing information with colleagues and other organizations

BENEFITS OF MEMBERSHIP

- Choice of two of the three NCFR journals . . .

Journal of Marriage and the Family is a medium for the publication of original theory, research interpretation, and critical discussion.

Family Relations is directed toward practitioners serving the family field through education, counseling, and community service.

Journal of Family History serves as a clearinghouse for research in family history, anthropology, economics, psychology, demography, sociology, and literature.

- Option of a third journal subscription at a reduced rate
- NCFR Newsletter . . .

The Report covers Council affairs, news of general interest to members, and updates from the president. Also included in this quarterly publication are calendar listings of workshops, seminars and conferences and employment opportunity announcements.

- Option of subscribing to the COFO Washington Memo . . .

The COFO Memo is published three times per year by the Coalition of Family Organizations. It covers timely Washington family policy issues.

- Reduced Annual Meeting registration rate . . .

The Annual Meeting provides an opportunity to meet leading professionals in the family field, to share in stimulating presentations by plenary speakers and Sectional meetings, book exhibits, film screenings, and seminars-in-the-round.

- Affiliated state or regional council membership . . .

Affiliation with state councils carries the benefits of networking with other NCFR members on a local level and receiving state or regional newsletters.

- Option for membership in one or more NCFR Sections . . .

Section membership allows individual NCFR members to align with others who share their special interest in family therapy, education and enrichment, family policy action, research and theory, international issues, minority concerns, or family and health issues in order to pursue these interests further.

- Access to free NCFR Employment Service mailings, announcements . . .

The Employment Service provides free, bi-monthly listings of position openings to interested NCFR members, and hosts the ongoing employment service at the Annual Meeting.

- NCFR Service and Achievement Awards
